A GUIDE TO GLP-1 FRIENDLY MENUS

 Did you know?

Almost 7% of the UK population¹ are using or have used GLP-1 medication – that’s more than DOUBLE the 3.1% of people said to be following a vegan diet.²

The picture in Ireland is very similar, with 5% of people said to be taking the medication³

What’s more, a further 8% of adults have considered or are considering using the medication.⁴ Together, that equates to an estimated 8.25 million people in the UK turning to weight loss medication.

These figures are quite staggering and cannot be ignored in these challenging times. If you have vegan options on your menu, why wouldn't you also ensure that your offering is suitable for the significant number of customers whose requirements are not on the whole currently being catered for? In fact, research shows that 41% of GLP-1 users visit restaurants less often, with 47% also saying that they visit coffee shops and sandwich bars less often⁵.

Now, imagine if your menu clearly catered for your GLP-1 using customers, making their dining out experience easy and worthwhile. With 39%⁶ of UK adults being put off weight loss medication due to it being injected, imagine the impact that incoming oral solutions will have on the number of customers who eventually choose to go down this route, making now the prime time to act.

Small Plates, Big Impact

GLP-1 medication changes eating habits in a number of ways, with users naturally eating less impulsively, consuming smaller portions, and having a lower desire for sugary, greasy or very rich foods. In fact, large or high-fat meals can have adverse physical effects, meaning that people are likely to steer clear of these types of dishes altogether.

Traditional menus can be challenging for GLP-1 users, who often need smaller, nutritionally balanced portions. Small plates offer an ideal solution, allowing restaurants to cater to GLP-1 users without alienating other diners. In an increasingly health-conscious world, consumers are already more discerning about the nutritional balance of dishes, so menu adaptations would not just be solely for those on GLP-1 medications, but would bring dishes in line with the overall healthy eating trend. A varied small plates menu creates an inclusive social dining experience, where everyone can choose dishes they enjoy while sharing options that appeal to the whole table.

The key is balancing nutrition with variety, giving GLP-1 users an easy and enjoyable reason to dine out while creating a social experience that keeps customers coming back.

Across the Sectors

These principles extend beyond hospitality into care and education, where nutrition and portion size are equally critical.

- In care settings, older adults often have reduced appetites, making it essential to deliver smaller, nutrient-dense meals that support strength, immunity, and overall wellbeing.
- Children and young people require balanced nutrition to fuel growth, concentration, and long-term health.
- University and college students are increasingly making more health-conscious choices, with demand for protein-led items. Whilst this demographic is not taking up GLP-1 medications in the main, curiosity is growing amongst this age group.

Did you know?

75% of GLP-1 users are interested in seeing restaurants offer smaller portions specifically aimed at them.⁷

The Balanced Plate

A balanced small plates menu should deliver high nutritional value in a compact, satisfying and appealing format. The goal is to create dishes that feel complete, energising and enjoyable without being overwhelming.

GLP-1 medications can affect users in different ways, but this is a general guide to sensible nutritional balance with easy-to-digest ingredients to consider when designing dishes.

Country Range Chick Peas

PROTEIN

Protein reserves muscle, increases satiety and stabilises blood sugar. Select lean cuts of meat and add legumes and pulses to vegetarian dishes. Protein-forward dishes should make up a good portion of a small plates menu.

- POULTRY
- FISH
- GREEK YOGHURT
- COTTAGE CHEESE
- LEGUMES
(SUCH AS LENTILS, CHICK PEAS AND BEANS)
- PORK AND BEEF
(LEAN CUTS)

FIBRE

Fibre is highly important for GLP-1 users as constipation and digestive slowdown are among the most commonly reported side effects of the medication. Aside from this, there is an overall focus on increasing fibre intake, with up to 96% of UK adults reportedly failing to meet fibre recommendations¹. Its benefits include aiding fullness, digestion, and blood sugar control. Aim for a variety of colours to provide essential vitamins, minerals and visual appeal.

Frozen vegetables are flash-frozen within hours of harvest to lock in nutrients and are an excellent cost-effective source of fibre.

- VEGETABLES
- WHOLE GRAINS + CEREALS
- NUTS
- BEANS AND LEGUMES
- FRUIT
(KEEP SKIN ON APPLES AND PEARS)
- CHIA, PUMPKIN, AND FLAX SEEDS

FATS

Healthy fats enhance flavour and are key for nutrient absorption and metabolic health. They can also slow digestion and support hormones. Whilst avoiding very high fat dishes, it is important to include healthier fats such as the following:

AVOCADO

FATTY FISH

NUTS AND SEEDS

OLIVE OIL

(SUCH AS SALMON, SARDINES AND MACKEREL)

Did you know?

54% of GLP-1 users said that high protein was the most important factor in a meal, followed by 46% who said low calorie menu items mattered most²

You can offer a complete solution in one dish or design a menu which includes small dishes that serve different purposes. For example, protein plates, a selection of healthy sides containing complex carbohydrates and fibre-rich vegetables and optional sauces and dressings, allowing customers to customise their meal based on their requirements.

CARBOHYDRATES

Whilst carbs can sometimes get a bad press they are a key factor in a balanced nutrient-dense plate. The key here is selecting complex, wholegrain carbohydrates and controlling portion size.

QUINOA

WHOLEGRAIN
OR BROWN RICE

OATS

WHOLEWHEAT
PASTA AND BREAD

STARCHY
VEGETABLES

(SUCH AS SWEET
POTATOES, SQUASH
AND POTATOES)

Menu planning

A well-designed menu will appeal to all diners, whilst making the experience easy and enjoyable for GLP-1 users, without them feeling singled out. Try including a small plates selection and customisable dishes to enable customers to take more control over their choices.

SMALL PLATES

A balanced selection of small plates gives customers the choice to customise their own meal. Presentation and quality are key factors in ensuring perceived value for money.

* Easy upsell add-ons increase overall spend whilst giving customers more choice.

BOWLS

Bowls are increasingly popular and are a great way to offer a fully customisable meal, with transparent ingredients, pricing and plenty of upsell opportunities.

* Offers that encourage multiple small plates increase spend whilst giving customers perceived value.

Did you know?

GLP-1 medications can affect people in different ways with some ingredients having adverse effects on some but not others. This is another good reason to make dishes customisable and keep things like sauces and dressings optional.

INCREASE PROFITS, REDUCE WASTE

Smaller portions do not automatically equate to lower spend, in fact by aligning portion options with evolving dining habits, businesses can reduce food waste while supporting stronger profit margins. A well-designed menu which focuses on quality, flavour, nutrition and giving customers an easy way to customise their experience can result in higher spend and increased visits.

Breakfast + Brunch

Breakfast is emerging as the most disrupted meal of the day, with many GLP-1 users eating just one or two meals a day.¹

Meanwhile, there has been a shift in dining habits overall, with consumers not conforming to traditional meal times. Therefore, breakfast and brunch menus work well when they're an all-day offering with a variety of customisable dish formats, offering that all important protein-led energy boost.

Build a customisable menu, including the following:

PROTEIN FIRST OPTIONS: poached or scrambled eggs on toast, egg white omelette, and smoked salmon plates.

LIGHT AND NUTRITIOUS BOWLS: porridge with customisable toppings, chia pudding and yoghurt with fruit.

SAVOURY SMALL PLATES: such as avocado on toast, beans on toast or poke bowls.

CUSTOMISABLE COOKED BREAKFAST: giving the customer the flexibility to choose from a list of components to build their own plate.

SMOOTHIES AND PROTEIN SHAKES: seasonal specials and on-trend flavours.

SMASHED PEAS ON TOAST

A lower cost alternative to avocado, peas provide fibre and vitamins whilst being low in fat. You could make this dish customisable by making the poached egg, bacon and feta optional add-ons.
